Expositors understand fleshly lust and concupilcence, which David feasted with this lamb; others, the devil, who was as well pleased by Davids enteresining his tentations, and committing adultery, as if he had made him a featt. V. 6. And he shall restore the lamb some fold.] This word being of the dual number, some understand swice seur, i. e. eight-sold; doubling his penalty upon him, because he had no pity. And it stems the penalty of theft varied , feeing in Solomons time there was required feven fold restitution, Pro. 6, 31. unlesse it may be meant there that the thief shall make full and perfect restitution; in which sense the number feven is often taken. Now if it be here meant, that he thall both die and alfo reflore, it was to fhew Davids greater abhorrency of fo foul a fact, feeing he adjudged him not only worthy of death, but also worthy to make reflitution to the poor man, because his death, though it might fatshe bis mind, yet could not repair his estate which was damnified by him ; therefore there must be also made some considerable re-

Neither doth this crofs that Jam. 1.5. that God givesh to all men liberally, and upbraideth no man: Seeing that may well be understood of Prayer, unto the frequent use of which the Apostle there exhorteth, faying, that God doth not thallenge any for their often asking, for deny their fuits because he hath already done much for them; as it is the manner of men to upbraid those with former benefits who feem too bold in importanting them to grant new fuits : thus God upbraideth none ; but the oftner men come, the better welcome; and the more importu nate they are, the more like to speed. Or elie, God doth not upbraid men with his benefits to thame and reproach them, but only putterh his fervants in mind of them when they ungratefully forget them, that by this means he may bring them to repentance. And thus he dealeth with David in this place.

and thy masters wives into thy bosome] Not to marry them : for that had been incest, Lev. 18.8,15. Seeing David having marryed Michal nad near meets. Lev. 18.3, 15. Seeing David having marryed Michail to the control of the control into bis befome is only meant that he had his choice of all the women that were under Sauls subjection; for all the women in the land had heen his subjects whilest he reigned; and so any other might in that sense have taken Sauls wives as well as David, that is, such as had been under his government. The Rabbins fay that Eglah and Rizpah are here meant. But neither do we read that Eglah was Sauls, or Rizpah Davids wife. I conceive the meaning is, that God had exalted David to fuch Regal power and dignity, that all generally that belonged to Saul were at his diffoling; yea, even his wives and concubines, which were most neer and dear unto him, were so in any lawful way; yea, in respect of his sovereign power, he might have taken them into his own bofome and bed, feeing there was none that could hinder him, if he in his own conficience could have dispensed with Gods law. Neither doth God herein approve of such a fact as taking of Sauls wives, no nor yet of polygamy; for it was not a gift of allowance, but of providence, tolerating for a time the plurality of wives. So Shimei curied David, not by Gods allowance, but by his sufferance, ch. 16, 10, 11. though it be there faid that God had bidden him.

V. 9. Wherefore hast thou despised the Covenant of the Lord] By transgressing the second table of the Law, the sum whereof is, that we should Love our neighbours as our felves, Give every one his own, and Do to others as we would have them do unto us. This law David had gricyoully transgressed by his sins of adultery and murder, and hoped by policies and fhifts to have concealed them, though God, who feeth all feerees, did behold him. And for this contempt he is here

And thus this rich mans theft, being not barely to , most treacherously berrayed into the Ammonites hands , and together with him divers others of the Army; and also because hereby Gods people had fome cause of discouragement, and their enemies bein g heartned with this victory, would the more fland on their ftrength, and make the more desperate relistance ; yea, would take occasion hereby to insule over Gods people and their religion, feeing he had given them no better fucceffe.

V. 10. Now therefore the fword shall never depart from thine house? Here God threatheth to punish and correct David by retaliation or law of requital, like for like, that by the punishment he might be lead as it or requiring like ter take, that of the positionist in this like to be seen six were by the hand to the fight of his fins; as a dog that is beaten before the fleep which he hash worried. He had finned by killing Urlah with the fword, and therefore those of his family must with the fword kill one another ; yea, the fword must never depart from his house ; according to that of our Saviour, Mat. 26.52. All that take the fword, Shall perift with the fword. So Gen. 9.6. Rev. 13.10. By never, fome underthand unto the coming of Christ the King of peace. And indeed that period of time is fometimes fignified by this phrase. So this threatning should relate, not only to that blood which was shed in Davids time, but also to the wars which followed his day es, between his posterity and the ten tribes, with many other enemies, as the Edomites, Moabites, Ammonites, Allyrians and Chaldeans. But I rather conceive that by never here is meant a long time, or as long as David lived, as the word is used Gen. 43.9. I sam. 1, 22. Deut. 15.17. and that the threatning bath reference to the fword fheathed in Davids children, Amnon, Absolom and Adonijah, and to those civil and unnatural wars railed against him by trayerous Absalom, who came out of his own

V. 9. Behold, I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house] e. For thy fins I will atthick thee with many evils by means of thine own children, giving them over to commit rapes, murders and unnatural rebellions. This was verified in Amnon, Abfalom, Adonijah, and others of Davids posterity, who perified by the sword. For though God was not the Author of thefe evils as they were fins, yet he had an hand in them as they were punishments, Amos 3.6. Is, 45.7. And as they were fins, the power of acting was from him; for in him we live, and move, and have our being, Act. 17.28. though the malignity of the actions was from the agents ; as the rider maketh his lame horiego, resh in the fin of Josephs breteren felling him into Egypt, whereby Jacob and his family were preserved in the time of famine; and in that grand fin of Judas, the Priefts, Pilate, and the Souldiers, in crucifying Chrift, which God made to be the means of mans redemption. Yes. God semetimes punisheth one fin with another, not by infusing of finful corruption, but by an active permission, leaving men to the corruption of their own hearts, and withdrawing his grace: and to the objects of in being presented unto them, they lay hold on them; and beng eninared, they fall into fin to their perdition. And this is the greatelt punishment that God inflicteth on wicked men in this life, and that which David wifheth his desperate enemies, Pfa. 69.27.

This confession , though very shore, yet was effectual and accepted of G od, because it was joyned with true contri-tion and unseigned repentance in the fincerity of his keart, which God respecteth more then verbal expressions. Yes, it may be, Davids con-fession was therefore to short and abrupt, because his heart was so opfession was therefore so short and abrupt, because his heart was so op-pressed with grief thus he could not unter more words: for small griefs ed without circumcision, and yet David was cheared and comforted asfpeak and are talkative, when great ones are filent, or expressed in few words. But afterwards, when his heart was a little unburdened and eafed, forrow having found a vent, he at large expresseth it, purposely penning the one and fiftieth Pfalme to lay open his fin and forrow, yea and to proclaim his fhame: which he had formerly fo carefully covered ; and not contenting himfelf to pen a Pfalm on this fubject, he also prefixed a title to shew the occasion, A Pfam of David, when Nathan the Prophet came unto bim, after be had gone in to Bathsheba. Neither doth he think this enough, unlesse he commit it to the chief suffician to be sung publickly in the Congregation as one of the penitential Plaims. On the contrary, Sauls confession, though more full and large in words, 1 Sam. 15.24. was not regarded, because it proceeded not from a true penitent heart, but was in meer bypocrifie , and also because he was a man rejected of God; whereas David was beloved, and in the flate of grace by free election.

II. Absalom had murdered Amnon, and was now the chief cause of flughtering twenty thousand of the Lords people, whom he had first of Hughtering twenty trioutand or the Loros people, whom he had not teld into rebellion; and therefore Josh, as General of the army, might lawfully put him to death, being failed into his hands, and execute martial law upon him. III. He knew that in all likelihood Abfalom, if he lived ftill, would be a dangerous enemy to the whole State; and therefore he thought it best to cut him off, preferring the safety of the Common wealth before the private affection of the King. Upon these grounds it stemeth David was so convinced of the lawfulnesse of Joabs fact, that he did nos after the battel blame him for it, nor make it any part of his charge; when afterwards he accused him to Solomon for killing Abner and Amsia; although it may be probably thought it was not the least part of his quarrel against him, in that, contrary to his expers command he had flain his beloved Absalom, that through his

Davids just displeature by divers acts, as the killing of Abner and Ab-falom, and by his harsh and insolent speeches, and peremptory exposurfalom, and by nis natin and intorent species, and percupiony expoun-lations unbelecenting a fubject, yet confidering how faithful he had al-wayes been unto him, what good and futcefsful fervice he had ever done, and that in those particular failings his main intention was to promote the good of the King and the whole Common-wealth, and contrari-wife how faithless and rebellious Amasa had been unto him, I cannot fee how it could ftand with Davids justice to advance Amasa, who had fo ill deferved, and to turn Joab out of that place which of right belonged unto him both by Davids promife and his own purchase, in hazarding his life in fuch a dangerous fervice, as was the affaulting and taking the frong fort of Zion. Neither can I think his policy juitifiable in using fuch a means to reduce that party that had stood out against him, to their obedience, as he had formerly done to Abner with like successe, Nor can I but (as I conceive) justly suspect that his chief quarrel a-gainst Joab was the death of his dearest Absalom, though it brought so much good both to him and the whole Common-wealth, feeing he pardoned greater faults in Amaia and others, yea, inflead of punishing did reward and advance them. But though David were an holy and just and the additional course, we the was but a man; and had his failings, and this among the relt. Nor can I think (as fome do) that he did thus by a fecret inflinct of Gods Spirit; for what were this, but to make it the veil to hide mens failings? If David be confidered as a private mnn, you have more interest in him then we; but consider him as a King over the whole land, and then we have a greater share in him then you, being ten tribes. and you onely two though Benjamin be also reckoned with you a and so we are the far greater part of this Kingdom. In this contention between Judah and Ifrael the mutability and unconfished of the common people is very observable, seeing they who lately rejected David and rebelled against him, do now in a hot contention strive who should have the reareft intereft in him. So the Jews dealt with our bleffed Saviour, one ay finging Hofanna unto him , and bleffing him, and the next day cry-

And the words of the men of Judah were stereor then the words of the men of I [rati] i.e. They were more rough and flour, prefuming upon their priviledges, because the King was of kin to them, and the royal dignity fetled on their tribe , and because they were the greateft and richeft, and in wars had precedency before the other tibes. This contention the King hearing, and faying nothing to compole it, being loath to displacife either party, it afterwards broke out into a further and greater inconvenience. Andthe King faid, I will give them Being appointed by God to give them faitsfaction, he promiteth to deliver leven of Stuls ions into their hands to be hanged by them. Here it may be demanded first, how this could stand with Davids justice, to punsh the children for the fashers sin; convary to the practice of Amaziah 2 Kings 14. 6. which was grounded on Gods Law, Deut. 24. 16. I answer, Davids fact was lawful, yea necessary, seeing he had Gods warrant and direction for it, who Javini, yea necessary, seeing he had soots warrant and direction for it, who of airccaton from you, who when he pelate to oblighene with his your law. But Genomly, but you have been defined by the how will this stand with Gods justice, to have Sauls positry pure reck. Some underthand that the firesat the frescott he upon the dead bodies without for his fine, contrary to what he procedite in Exc. 18. 20. I answer; per severe them from binds and betalts. But eften the firesat the fir unto the third and fourth generation, that is not to be understood simply and absolutely without any reference to the fin of the children , for principally In his punishments he histh respect to a mans own fin a As in this place, Sauls posterity are punished for his bloody sin; but it is not simply for his fin alone, they being innocent, but because they were accessive and guilty of the like cruelty; in which regard they are here called bis bloody house. And it was juft, in way of reraliation and requiral, that as Saul had flain the Gibeonites and their posterity, fo they also should flay his. Yea, but God often punisheth the fins of parents upon their children, though they be not guilty of them. I answer though they be into guilty of them. I answer though they be innocent of their parents firs, yet they have fins enough of their own which God of their pretents first, yet they have first stongsh of their own which God may juffly pointly, when and how he pleafeth, shough he may stee occasions of. I dobing: by ceiling to remembrance the fin of the parents. And this he may do juffly in their infants, who are foreit showled in the fame poultiliment with their parents, shough they never committed any addustive figure of the parents, and the first parents, shough they never committed any addustivently fifther they have been seen to be difficultified into temporary, they are the state of the first parents and the parents of the state of the parents of the pare and eremail in the former, children, and fuch as are innocent of those fins for which the punishment is inflicted, are dually involved, because they live in the fame community and corporation; and are as it were members of the fame community and corporation; and officers, beling (as it fame body) and therefore they rejoyce and mourn together sand as they pare feemeth) four in mind to do it by the example of Rizph. elcipare & communicate in temporal bleffings & benefits, to allo in outward croffes and calamities, like the members of the fame body, which though they be found and healthy in themselves; yet sympathize with their fellowmembers, if they be difeafed and pained, But as for those punishments which neembers, it mey be alteated and painted, but as for those purministics which are eternal, they are never inflicted upon any but only for their ownfins, and therefore of these chiefly the Propher is to be understood, Ez.k. 18, 4, 20, Deut. 11. 12, 14. and 28. 23, 24. And though it doth not appear how long the bodies did hang, yet it is manifest that it was much longer then the ordinary time, feeing they were to hang from the be-ginning of barley-harvest till the Lord by sending rain should testifie that his wrath was appealed. And though this were not deferred, as fome guels, till the wiual time of their latter rain, i.e. September, for in an extraordinary case God bad sent rain in an extraordinary time, or else it would not have been fo manife it that his wrath was pacified) yet it appeareth by Rizpales preparation and attendance that they hanged much longer then one day; the time appointed by God in the Law for the hanging of dead bodies on atree, Deut 21, 23. This David could not, have done without manifest transgereffing Gods express Commandment, but that he had herein special direction from God , who when he pleafeth may dispense with his own law.

his chief Worthies, Captains and Commanders, who as they were men of great valour and fortitude so also were they most faithful to him, both in his affil Aed condition before he came to the Crown, coming in to him, and giving him their affiltance for making him King, 1 Chro. 11. 10, and afterwards also doing him fervice in all his wars against his enemies both forrsin and domethical. And having fo well deferved of David for their fai.hful fervice, they were worthy to have their names registred and eternized by having them kept in this facred record. Now thefe Worthles are faid to have been, as they are here recorded, thirty and feven in all v. 39. And they are divided into two tanks. The first fix were chief Colonels and Commanders over fo many Brigades it may be of the whole army, each containing several Regements, all under the conduct and command of Josb the Lord G :neral ; who chough not here named, yet must necessarily be underflood and supplyed to make up the full number of thirty seven. The other thirty were it may be Caprains over thousands, or the like number. Again, the fix great Worthies are divided into two ternions; the first three being most eminent and famous for strength, valour and noble exploits ; the other three, though exceeding val arous, yet not matching the first in height of fortitude and m gnanimity or at least not in ftrength and warlike attnieve

But this is faid to have been in a field of leatiles, that in a field of barley. But this cannot be, seeing the Philitims then had no wars with David, but with Saul onely. Therefore this is rather to be referred to the beginning of Davids reign over all Ifruel, when as the Philistims are fald to have come up to feck bim, and so have pisched in the valley of Rephaim, ch. 5. 17, 18, and in this place. And this is faid to have hapned in the time of harveft, when Kings usually go out to war, in respect that then they may have plenty of forrage. and the hot feason might be the cause of Davids thirst, and his thirst put him in mind of the well of Bethlehem, which by reason of his old acquaint-

And therefore it is plainly faid 1 Chr. 21. 1. Satan ftood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel. Whereby we see not to understand that Satan had any absolute power in himself to make David commit this sin, but that God, to the end that he might make David commit twis in, but that God, to the end that he migut take occasion to punish Davids and the propies former fins, did give him over to be rempted by Satan, and withheld his gree, whereby be might have been inabled to withfrand the entration and so being left to himself he committed this fin of numbring the people, which did arife out of pride and confidence in his own strength, no necessary preffing him unto it, as is plainly implyed v. z. For he did it doubtingly, and therefore not of faith, yea, against his own reason and conscience, the Kings work seeming abominable unto him, because he feared it would bring some judgement upon the land, I Chron. 21.3,6. and yet he would do it to avoid the Kings displeasure; which is to be condemned as a fin in him. But yet feeing all this was grounded but on his own jealouse and suspicion, and not on any certain knowledg, and it was possible that he might otherwife have been perswaded of better intentions in David in this action, out of his own charity, and the experemons in Lavia in this action, out or mis own entity, and the experience he had of his Kings piety and integrity; and if fo, then it had been apparently finful to have refifted his commands; therefore in fuch a doubtful case it was best to take the futer side. And something also a souncing one at was next to take one turer use. And tomething allo it is, that this action of loab patieth in Scripture without any senture, though in David it be deeply condemned as a great in. Howforver, I contels, it had been much better for loab if he had not fuffered himielf to be acted with an exoneous confeience, either in obeying or difobeying his Kings command, but had humbly fearched out the depth of the matter with further expostulation, so far as might have stood with his duty and allegeance ; feeing if we have onely the guidance of an ignorant and erroneous confcience, we shall easily fall into fin, whether we do an action, or leave it undone.

The Argument of the two Books of the KINGS

THe Books of the KINGs record an History of four hundred thirty cight years, whereof Selemen risgined fourty over all the two Kingdoms: Two Tribes, has after his right hole Tribes were divided into two Kingdoms: Two Tribes, Indah and Benjamin, made one Kingdom, called Judah; wherein the posteritie of David and Solomon reigned three hundred sevents and subgears. In which simenineteen Kings of the fame flock succeeded each other : Onely one interruption was made for and insystem: the space of six years by Athalia an usury, 2 King X 1.3. Of the Kings of Judah some were very good, eiters idilater. The other ten Tribes made another Kingdom, called Utach, which continued but two hundred thirty and seven years, till the fixth of Hebakiah, when Holera the lass King of Israel was carried away captive, 2 King, 17,6, in that time there were twent Kings of Israel, and ten several stocks, whereof one destroyed another. For sirst, feecboains stock was destroyed another. be that make the peoples and the womens Court to be but one and the same, yet so divided as the men were in one part thereof, and the women in the other; by reason of which division they might be accounted two Courts, Another Court they make to be for fuch as were unclean, and for strangers or Gentiles; yet so as there was a whet unctean, and to triangers or centures; yet to as thete was a division therein, to as the unclean were in one part, and frangers in another. All these divisions may hand with that distinction of two Courts which is expresly set down 2 Chr.4.9. Namely, the Priests Court and the great Court. The great Court compassed the Temple and the Priests Court round about. In the former, part of the great Court were fuch lifealities as were accounted clean, and they both men and women, but divided one from another, as we head before, I nhe other part were unclean, perfors and aliens, and their alfo divided one from another. This was it for which

But this is an Hebrew phrase implying a perpetuity, ch. 12.19. Gen. 26.33. & 32.31. So long as the Temple stood, they so remained therein. This distinct setting down of the covering the Ark and drawing out the staves hath, as other rites, a mystery couched under it; which I take to be this. The Ark was in fashion as a little chest; and in chests or cabinets mens pretions things use to be laid up: So the Ark was an especial type of Christ in whom are treasured up Gods most pretions things. The cover of the Ark was the mercy seat, Exod. 25.21. and into the Ark the testimony, i. e. the two tables, was put, v.g. Exod. 25.16. That testimony bare witnesse against us for our fins, and held out a curfe; but the mercy-feat kept this reftimony in the Ark, to as it could not give evidence againft us. Again the Ark was covered with the Cherubims, to thew the unfearchable myfteries that are in Chrift: But the flaves were fo far pulled our as they might be feen, to give evidence that there was an Ark. Thus the types and propheties and promifes under the Law did give evidence of fuch mysteries as are clearly revealed under the Gospel.

V. 9. There was nothing in the Ark fave the two tables of flow! Deut.

10.5. This without all question was most true at chartime when

Solomon fet the Ark in his place. We read of other things fet by the Ark, and before it. As the book of the Law (not the moral law written in tables of ftone, but other ordanances written by Mofes, especially the book of Deuteronomy) was put in the side of the Ark, namely in fonde coffer fer by it, Deut. 3.1.26. This night be it which Hilkiah found a King. 22.8. The por of manna was also appointed to be fer before it, Exod. 16.33. and Arons rod which bladded, Numb. 17.10. But nothing is faid to be in it fave the two tables of stone. Many suppose the Apostle, Hebr. 9.4. placeth the golden por that had manna and Arons rod in the Ark as well as the tables of the Covenant. His words are thefe, The halpest of all had the golden cenfer, and the art of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, note copyer, and no not py the covariant vorticals rooms about raisp year, proberies was the gliddle pat that the dunctag, and A moors red that build still, and the tables of the covariant. But this relative wherein may have reference to the follell of all, fifth mentioned, as well as so the Arkgand then the meaning will be shar all those things were in the Moft holy place. Or if it have reference to the Arkg, he speaketh of the things that were in it either before Solomons time, or after, a-bout the captivity. The notation of the Hebrew word is taken from the contrary; for it fignifieth an holy one; which title unclean persons, being of all others farthest from holines, have given them in scorn. Thus the word that properly signifieth bleffing is put for curfing, ch. 21.10. Or this fin here mentioned may be taken for obscene and filthy idolatry, such as is mentioned. ned Ezek, 8.14. On the second Book of the Kings. Commonly called the fourth Book of the

The Argument of the fecond Book of KINGS

THe second Book of the Kinga continues the history of the Kinga of Israel and Judah to the Captivity of them both. The History of Israel is from the Rebellion of Moah in Ahardahs time ch. 1. 1. to the Captivity of Hosbaa, ch. 18. 20. A tissory of livest is from the Revellion of Azoav in Anazzans time CO.I.I. to the Captivity of Holbea, Ch.18.10. Which was the space of C.I.X. years, wherein involve Kings reigned one after another. The History of Judah is from the and of feelshaphate right to the Captivity of Zadehiah, which was the space of CCCCV, years Confides the XXV. years in mationed Ch.23.27.) wherein fifteen Kings, besides at that is a furper, Ch.11.7, Get. respect one after another. The Books of the Kings are distinguished, not at if they contained Histories of different matters, but because if the whole History had been compiled in one Book, it would have seemed to great a volume. Behold the c'ild was dead, and laid upon his bed] It is remarkable, that the child being laid on the Prophets bed, and the Prophets haff by disown appointment laid upon the childs face, the child should fill remain dead. Some attribute this to the unbellef of Gehazi, fome to the unbelief of the mother of the child, Note Mat, 13. 58. But certainly the Prophet had no warrant from God, either ordinary or extraordinaty, to cominand Gehazi to lay his haffupon the child, but did it of his own head; and therefore God withheld his power, without which all that man can do is nothing. Prophets themelves must have their warrant from God to do what they do. Whether the King went to the idol-Temple, or any whither elfe, Naman must go with him. It may be for the time of his leptoile he forbore that duty; but now his leprofie is taken away, he conceived he must do it again. Thus was he brought to do outward reverence before the idol.

and I bow my felf in the house of Rimmon! In this phrase his wor-ship towards the idol is set out. For the Hebrew word translated bow down is frequently used to set out Divine worship, oft applyed to the true God, as Pfal.5.7. & 99.9. So alfo to idols, Deut.4.19.

Many take this as a purpose of the Syrian to joyn with Idolaters in their outward worship: but the words do not neceffarily imply any such purpose, but rather a supposition of some frailty; q.d. Though I purpose to worship no God but the God of Israel, yet if my Master require me to accompany him into the house of Rimmon, and there, he leaning on me, I be caufed to bow down, the Lord pardon me. Thus he accounts his bowing a fin. V. 4. And the King talked with Gehazi Gehazi was infected with leprofic, ch. 4.27, whereupon a great doubt is made about the Kings talking with him. For a leper was to be put out of the camp, Lev. 13.46. Some think this hiftory was acted before that of Naaman, ch.5.1,&c, and then there is no doubt about that point, because Gehazi was not then a leper. But there is no reason to alter the order of the histories upon that ground. For though the law commanded that the leper should dwell alone without the camp, yet it no way forbids one that is clean totalk with a leper. Besides, Gehazi upon fight of Gods displeasure against him and judgment upon him for his fin might repent, and upon his repentance have his judgment removed, and be cleanfed. V.10. And Hezebiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees. This is spoken in regard of mans apprehen-fion, and in comparison to the shadows going backward. For it being the proper course of the Sun to go forward, the miracle would onely have been in the speedy and more then ordinary hashing of the shadow forward; which notwithstanding simply in its self is a very great matter, extraordinary and miraculous. For the Sun that caufeth his shadow is constant in his course, and never runs more swiftly or speedily at one time then at another Burto go backward would have been miraculous in the very thing it felf; for the Sun never doth fo of it felf; and also in the suddenness of it, which this other intended.

For questionieste all the world. especially Astronomers, Astrologers, and others, that took notice of the course of the heavens, could not but observe such a remarkable alteration. True it is that many in all places of the world hight observe it, and yet not know the ground and reason thereof But it is probable that they in Babylon had heard that the Lord of heaven and earth had caufed that alteration, and that upon Hezekiahs recovery; therefore Berodach-Baladan fends both to congranulate the Kings recovery, and also to be more fully in-structed in the cause of the suns going backward; and it may be withall to ingratiate himself into the favour of Hezekiah, that he might have affiftance from him in case of need against the King

ANNOTATION

On the first Book of the

CHRONICLES.

The general Argument of the two Books of Chronicles.

The two Book of Chronicles, of old compiled in one, contain an history of three thensand four hundred fifty and fever years at least, even from addam, I Chr. 1. 1 to the return of the Israelites from the Babylonish capitolity, I jeven year at topt, even from a name, 1 our that the treatment of the special product of the perman of these 2 Cer. 36 23. Tea, the genealogy of Davids posterists extended for further, 1 Chr. 2.19, Ge. The perman of these Books pruned also that of Exta, as appears by the two less verses of the second Book of Chronicles, and the three suff of Exta, which are almost the same word for word. By which also it appears that they were penned after the capitotity. And it is probable that the genealogies here let down and a great pare of the Histories were taken out of Records kept by fome of the Priefts or Levites all the time of the captivity.

The special Argument of the first Book of the Chronicles.

An History of two themsand nine hundred feurscore and seven years is registred in the sirst Bank; of which two them.

And nine hundred sourty and seven are passed over in reciting Genealegies, a sew brist historical passed thing bere and there inferred, and the death of Saul added thereto, th. 10. The Genealegies are an evidence of Gods providence in one interesting the Church generation after generation, and memorials thereof being for the most part of such as apparaised to see Church. Fourty years more are added about the alls of David in the time of his reign, with while death the first Book is concluded, ch.29.27, &c.

The Title.

The fif Book] This diffinction is expressed by reason of that division of the Chronicles which the Church hath uled for many generations. See the general argument.

Of the Chronicles A Chronicle is a register of acts done time after time. The Hebrew title, Words of days, or, Dreds of dages, importeth the same that the title Chronicles duth. The Greek title, Пасодынация, Remainders, hath relation to the Books of the Kings, as if the Chronicles had gathered up what the Books of the Kings had left out. True it is, that in the Books of the Kings there are frequent references to the Book of the Chroniclus; but thefe Books of facred Chronicles cannot be there meant, because not then penned. See the general Argument, Befides, many things there referred to the Books of the Chronicles are not found in thefe Books.

Some, to make up the full fenic, would add this phrase, it born, as it is had been said, of Adam 8 beth is born. Some thus, Adam 8 beth is born. Some thus, Adam 8 beth is lon, and to in the reft, Shoth was not Adam 6 first son, but Cain, Gen. 4,21. But Cain and his posterity were an impious generation, and belonged not to the Church, Abel was Adams next son: But he, before he had any children was flain by Cain, Gen. 4.8. After Abels death Sheth was born, and called Sheth, because put or appointed instead Enoth The eldeft fon of Sheth called Enoth in memorial of English The cheek tonor special cause English in memorial of that milerable and mortal condition whereunto man was brought. For English fignifieth milerable or mortal. The posterity of Cain ha-ving filled a great part of the world, with an impious and profane brood, Enosh gathered such as came from him into a Church, and brought them to worship God publikely, he himself being as a Priest unto them in the room of Abel. In this respect it is said of Enoth his time, Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord,

Gen.4.26. These three first names, Adam, Sheth, Enosb, according to their signification import thus much, Man made mortal, V.a. Kenan, Mahlatel, Jered Of these three there is nothing registred, but their names, their long life, and that they begat some and daughters See Gen. 5.12, &c. V.3. Henoch] This man is expresly faid to be the seventh from Adam; and this genealogy declares it fo to be. He prophefied in his time of Chrifts coming unto judgment, Jude 1415. There is an excellent commendation given of him, that be multed with Gold, Gen., 2... The Hebrew word there uld implyed a canimal walking with Gol. To multe with Gold is all one as to walk before Gold, subsect for, Kims. God; whereof fee I King. 2.4. In that respect Henoch is said to have pleased God, Heb. 17 5. And as an evidence of Gods gracious acceptance of him it is faid that he was not: for God took him, Gen. 5.44. He was not on earth after the three hundred and fixty and five years of his life: For God had translated him that he should not fee death. That translation was both from one place to another, namely, from earth to heaven; and also from one condition to another, namely, from mortality to immortality. Thus was he translated as Elijah was afterwards, 2 King 2.11. and as the Saints was atterwards, 2 sange, 211 and contings, Cor. 157, 15, 25, 73, and in this repect he arver faw death, Heb. 11. f. Hough twere one of the best Partianthe before the flood, yet he lived the forcet flood, yet he lived the flower than of them all 160 as the best men may be foonest taken. unortent time of them all 100 as the best men may be 100 nest usual out of this world. Enochs constitual walking with the Lord well answereth the notation of his name, which is dedicated. By his parentage and constant pious carriage he is diffinguished from Cains fon, who gave his own name to a City that he built, Gen. 4.17. and from Abrahams grand-child by Keturah, Gen. 25. 4. and from Reubens son, Gen. 46.9. Though there be in our English translation a little difference in these names, yet in Hebrew they are the Methufhelah] This man lived the longest of all the Patriarchs be-Manujonary I his man lived the longest of a fifter a finite is before the slood, Gen. 5.27, yea, we may well say, the longest of all that ever were on earth. Some imagine that Adam may be accounted elder then he, because he was of man-age when first created. But Methushelah lived thirty nine years longer then Adam; and it is to be supposed Adam was created in the stature of a young man. Now grant him to be of such a seeming age when he cat of the forbidden tree as Christ was when he dyed upon the tree, and add so many years, (which were betwixt XXXIII, and XXXIV.) yerthey will not make up the full years of Methushelah, Methuhelah died about the time of the coming of the flood.

Lameel This Lameel the fon of Methushelah, is distinguished from that impious and cruel Lamcch which was of Ca ns posterity, Gen.4.18,19. He had the gift of prophesic as appears by the name Nonh which he gave to his son, and the reason rendred thereof, Gen. 5.29. He dyed about five years before the flood, V.4. Noab] This was the tenth and last great Patriarch before v.4., rows.) and was the tentral and the great cartainth observe the flood. For his fon Shem is reckened among the Partiatchs after the flood. His name fignifieth reft; and he brought comfort, reft and reftrefhing to the world. He was a lively type of Chrift, who is the comfort, reft and peace of man. In the Ark which he built was the feminary of the World and the Church preferred; a matter of great comfort and rest. In the sacrifice he offered up when he came out of the Ark God smelled a favour of rest, Gen. 8.2. To him God renewed a Covenant of peace and reft, no more to drown the world, Gen. 9.9. The hildory of this man is fer down Gen. 6, & 7, & 8, & 9. From the beginning of the world to the flood, which fell out in Noahs dayes, were a thousand fix hundred fifty and fix years.

Shem Though this man be here and in fundry other places fet Shefore Japheth, yet is Japheth said to be the elder, Gen. 10, 21.

And thus it appears to be so; Noah is said to beget shem, Ham, and Japheth when he was five hundred years old, Gen. § 32. And again it is faid, Shem was a bundred years old two years after the Moah, and continued about one year. Compare Gen. 7.11. with Gen. 8.1314. If then Shem had been born in the five hundredth year of Noah, he would have been an hundred years ald about year of Noahs entring into the ark. But it being two years after the flood before he was an hundred years old, he must by this computation be born when Noah was five hundred and three years old. Whereas it is faid that Noah was five hundred. years old, and begat Shem, Ham and Japheth, we are not to think that he begat all these three sons in that year, but, according to the meaning of the Hebrew phrase, he then began to beget them. In meaning of the Hebrew phrase, he then began to begat them. In the year he begat Japheth, two or three years after he begat Shem, and after these he begat Ham; for Ham was his younger fon, Gen. 9-4. Shem threefore is put in the first place for digni-ties lake, as, Index and Illmard, Gen. 3-5. 9. Factor and Essu, Gen. 28.5. Behraim and Manasses, Gen. 48.20. Shem was the famile and head of all those Partarchethat were born after the slood, and were in their order Progenitors of Christ. He lived about thiny years after Abrahams decease. And by reason of the many years he had lived before Abrahams time, his father, his mother, his descent, and beginning of his dayes were not known to Abraham and those that then lived. In this respect he is reputed both by many of the Jewish Rabbins and also by ancient and later Divines of the Christian Church to be that Melchisedech who met whese the Christian Church to be that we remueated who met Abraham, Gen. 14.18. Heb. 7.1, &c. Ham] This was the youngest of Noahs three sons; one of those that were in the ark, but after he came out of the ark, he was curfed for fcoffing at his fathers infirmity, Gen. 9.12,24,25. The land wherein his posterity was to dwell, was adjudged to the posterity of Shem, Gen. 12.7. which may be one reason why he is set next to Shem, before his brother Tapheth.

and Riphath] Or, Diphath, as it is in some copies. If we diligently compare divers parts of Scripture, we shall find difference in fundry names. Sometimes like letters are purone for another, as here, 7 R for 7 D. Compare Gen. 21.3. with Amos 7. 9. Some times a letter or fyllable is left out, as Jer, 22, 28. Sec. 2 King. 24.6. Sometimes letters or fyllables are transposed, as Salathiel, Matth. 1.12. for Shealtiel, Ezr. 3.2. Sometimes a letter or syllable Matth.,112, for Shipath's, P27,3,3, Sometimes a letter or 191able is added, as v.17. Milbs to m life, Gen. 10.3, Sometimes two or three names be given to one and the lame person, as a King, 23,30. Sometimes the same name is given to the male and semale sex, as v.36.
